Description

The Pulp docs mention that it may be a future feature to create a repo group with multiple repo types, and then perform operations upon everything in that group:

Repository Groups allow you to associate any number of repositories, even of varying content types, with a named group. Features that make use of repository groups are forthcoming in future releases of Pulp.

It would be extremely handy if I could put multiple repos together into a group, and then export them all at once. Export options would include a directory, or an chunked ISO file. Currently only the RPM plugin supports this, which makes it impossible to put say, RPM and puppet together on the same ISO.
