Description

Hello,

It would be a great 'ease-of-use' feature to have consumers in a group automatically bound to the consumer group repos when they are added to the consumer group. I tagged documentation as it wasn't clear that consumers must be added to the consumer group first then later bound repos to that consumer group. This isn't a bother on a first deployment, however when you register a new consumer within a group in the future, one would have to go through the additional task of querying what repos are bound to that consumer group. Which in some cases can be many and manually binding each repo at the consumer level.

Regards,
Horace

A workaround for this issue is probably to add a list of commands to a script to be executed every time a consumer is registered to a consumer group.

#!/bin/bash
```

pulp-admin rpm consumer group bind --consumer-group-id=group_1 --repo-id=repo_1
pulp-admin rpm consumer group bind --consumer-group-id=group_1 --repo-id=repo_2
pulp-admin rpm consumer group bind --consumer-group-id=group_1 --repo-id=repo_3 pulp-admin rpm consumer group bind --consumer-group-id=group_1 --repo-id=repo_4 pulp-admin rpm consumer group bind --consumer-group-id=group_1 --repo-id=repo_5
