Description

The RepositoryVersionDistribution is designed to be subclassed and can't be fully tested unless it is subclassed. Thus, the recommended way to test core's functionality is to test it using the AnsibleDistribution from pulp_ansible.

CRUD the PulpDistributor.

1. Create a repo and repo_version with at least 1 file content in it.
2. Create a AnsibleDistribution with 'repository' field set to the repository from step 1. Verify it accepts it.
3. Update the AnsibleDistribution to unset 'repository' and set 'repository_version'. Verify it accepts it.
4. Update the AnsibleDistribution to set both 'repository' and 'repository_version' and verify it rejects it. These options cannot be used together

Test AnsibleDistribution using repo and repo_version.

This test targets the following issue:

`Pulp #4846 <https://pulp.plan.io/issues/4846>`_

Do the following:

1. Create a repo and repo_version with at least 1 ansible content synced.
2. Create a AnsibleDistribution with 'repository' field set to the repository from step 1. Verify it accepts it.
3. Update the AnsibleDistribution to unset 'repository' and set 'repository_version'. Verify it accepts it.
4. Update the AnsibleDistribution to set both 'repository' and 'repository_version' and verify it rejects it. These options cannot be used together.
5. Attempt to update AnsibleDistribution to set repository to invalid repository path ans verify it rejects it.
