Description

Description of problem:
After installation of Pulp I run:
pulp-admin rpm repo create --repo-id=test --feed=http://copr-be.cloud.fedoraproject.org/results/msuchy/igal2/epel-7-x86_64/
And got this message:
WARNING: The server's SSL certificate is untrusted!

The server's SSL certificate was not signed by a trusted authority. This could be due to a man-in-the-middle attack, or it could be that the Pulp server needs to have its certificate signed by a trusted authority. If you are willing to accept the associated risks, you can set verify_ssl to False in the client config's [server] section to disable this check.

Because this is just testing deployment to get familier with Pulp, I would like to set verify_ssl to False, but I have not idea what is "client config" and now I have to dive into a documentation.

It would be nice if you can tell me that "client config" is either /etc/pulp/admin/admin.conf or ~/.pulp/admin.conf

One way to make this less vague is to catch this exception in every piece of code that uses the bindings and add in a message about the pertinent config file there.
